Product	Contracts for Difference ("CFDs")
Date of TMD	4 July 2025
Overview of this document	The DD Obligations aim to assist Consumers to obtain appropriate financial products by requiring product issuers and distributors to have a consumer-centric approach to the design and distribution of financial products. The purpose of this target market determination ("TMD") is to describe the target market for our CFDs, and to address the DD Obligations that apply to TMDs. If you are a retail client, you should refer to the relevant Product Disclosure Statement ("PDS") before deciding whether to acquire or continue to hold the relevant product. You can get a copy of the relevant PDS from our website. You should not base any decision to trade on the contents of this TMD, and this TMD is not suitable for the purpose of deciding whether to open a CFDs trading account or trade in CFDs.
Overview of CFDs	CFDs are complex and leveraged financial products which enable Consumers to trade on the price movement of underlying financial assets such as foreign exchange currency pairs, indices, cryptocurrencies, shares and commodities. CFDs involve a variety of fees or charges, including spreads, account charges, overnight fees and commissions, which may make them unsuitable for some investors. Such fees are notified to you before you purchase CFDs. A CFD is an agreement to exchange the difference in the value of a particular underlying asset from the time the contract is opened until the time at which it's closed. With a CFD, Consumers never own the underlying asset they have chosen to trade, but they can still benefit if the market moves in their favour, or make a loss should the market move against them. CFDs are short-term speculative investments and are not generally suitable for Consumers looking to make longer term investments.

	There are several reasons why Consumers may trade CFDs: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • to speculate on the rising or falling prices or levels of underlying assets. A Consumer can take long or short positions on a particular underlying asset depending on whether they think prices or levels will go up or down; • to trade without buying or selling the actual underlying asset (e.g. a physical share, currency pair or commodity); • to trade on margin. A Consumer only needs to deposit a small percentage of the full value of the trade as margin in order to open a position; and/or • to reduce risk by hedging against an existing investment (e.g. acquiring a CFD over shares the Consumer already holds).
Financial Products Issued by us	We issue CFDs in respect of the following underlying assets: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Currency pairs • Commodities including precious metals, energy and soft commodities • US Shares • Indices, including stock market indices • Crypto assets

Target market – criteria, scope and key attributes	Further details regarding Fusion’s target market for CFDs trading is set out below:
	Criteria	Scope and key attributes
	Client type:	Retail clients. This TMD does not apply to wholesale clients including sophisticated investors and professional investors.
	Ability to bear losses:	Clients who are prepared to lose amounts that can be as great as the sum of their total deposits. Our CFDs (and CFDs generally) are a high risk, highly leveraged and volatile trading product, and there is a real possibility that retail clients could lose all of their deposited funds. Expected returns may be positive or negative.
	Knowledge and experience	Only clients who have the requisite knowledge and experience to trade in CFDs as assessed by Fusion. Fusion undertakes assessments of the Consumer’s experience and knowledge trading in CFDs prior to approving and onboarding those clients.
	Tolerance to risk:	CFDs are only suitable for retail clients with a high investment risk tolerance. Please note there are particular risks associated with trading CFDs. Those risks include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Leverage: CFDs are leveraged products. Trading with leverage means that even a small change in the underlying asset could magnify the scope for both profits and losses. • Volatility: Derivative markets generally can be highly volatile (i.e. they move up and down in value quite quickly) so the risk that a Consumer will incur losses when they trade CFDs can be substantial. Note: mandatory negative balance protection ensures that Consumers cannot lose more than the amount deposited.

In some cases the sum of these holding costs may exceed the amount of any profits, or they could significantly increase losses. • Counterparty Risk: Fusion is an issuer of CFDs.
